

Is this home right for me?

Checklist for choosing an Anchor Home

When you go to visit a care home either for yourself or for a relative, take someone with you for another opinion and for moral support. Trust your gut feelings – you'll know what you like when you see it and if the home is for a relative, try to put yourself in their shoes and think what they might prefer. It may be the little things that appeal to you about the home, like being able to have visitors whenever you want or have a telephone line in your room.

You will have lots of questions when you visit. We have put together this list to help you remember the queries you may have and you can copy it as many times as you need and take it to each home you visit.
